

Teach with Center City Public Charter Schools: Join our Dance Teaching Team

Center City PCS is actively seeking experienced Dance Teachers for the 2012-13 school year. A Center City PCS Dance Teacher models a learning environment imbued with high expectations and rigor ensuring all students realize high levels of academic and character development. The Dance Teacher fosters a creative and expressive environment for students to develop an appreciation and skill set of the art of dance at Center City PCS.

Lead teachers are expected to mentor new teachers, contribute to Center City's wider learning community and collaborate with staff and families to achieve excellence in character, academics and service for every scholar. In addition to the faculty member expectations described below, there may be additional responsibilities required as scholar needs arise. Teachers report to the school principal.

A Center City PCS Dance teacher is expected to:

- Create a classroom culture that represents Center City's high expectations for every scholar and its core values. A Dance Teacher is expected to spend their time as follows:
 - Teach a wide variety of styles and techniques to Center City students, infusing a love of diverse styles of dance and associated cultures
 - Collaborate with dance teachers across the network to continue building a high-quality dance program that reaches all grade levels
 - Produce performance opportunities for students to showcase their dance skills
 - Inspire a love of dance through teaching a variety of dance styles and techniques
 - Communicate with parents and other teachers about student progress; and other tasks as assigned.
 - Teachers are expected to provide specific and timely feedback on scholar effort, behavior and work quality, and maintain a classroom that is designed and organized for maximal student learning.
- Plan and deliver daily effective differentiated instruction, based on Center City PCS' rigorous academic standards, student assessment data, and Center City PCS curriculum framework.
 - Design and implement daily lessons that engage all learners, fit in with a long-term learning plan, follow the Center City PCS lesson plan format, and are aligned with Center City PCS academic standards.
 - Conduct and organize on-going assessments of student performance using multiple assessment tools including standardized tests, performance assessments, anecdotal records, portfolios, and individualized assessments as appropriate.
 - Implement academic, social, or behavioral interventions and accommodations for individual students.
 - Collaborate with subject-level and grade-level partners (colleagues, consultants and specialists), and inclusion staff in the planning and implementation of learning experiences.
 - Use a common lesson plan format, turn-in weekly lesson plans to Principal and collect plans in a format that colleagues (e.g. a teaching fellow, specialist, or substitute) can access easily.
- Engage parents and families in their child's academic success. Keeping with the principle that the primary relationship between the school and a family is through the classroom teacher, teachers are to:
 - Foster a relationship with families beginning with an introductory phone call at the start of the year and maintained with a monthly newsletter that keeps parents abreast of classroom activities, academic units, and other announcements.
 - Regularly collect and organize samples of students' work from varied subjects to share with families.
 - Prepare scholar progress reports 4 times per year using standards agreed upon by the Principal and Central Academic Office staff.
 - Engage parent volunteers in Center City's "Service" objective as class and project volunteers.
 - Collaborate with other staff to plan family events at the school and citywide.

- Participate actively Center City’s learning community.
 - Participate in Center City PCS professional development workshops, including the Summer Professional Development Institute (2 weeks for returning staff, 3 weeks for new staff) and all day on Fridays throughout the academic year. This includes workshops, technique class, collaborative planning with other dance teachers, and choreography workshops.
 - Observe other teachers and facilitate observation of own classroom by other staff and administrators.
 - Participate in weekly grade-level planning sessions that involve instructional planning, discussion of student work, and curriculum development.
- Maintain high professional standards that contribute to school productivity:
 - Participate and assist as needed in the annual school review process, charter school monitoring, school evaluations, and other school compliance procedures.
 - Participate and assist in administering student placement assessments, including summer testing dates.
 - Follow school-wide procedures for communication, including checking email twice daily, reading staff announcements and checking the mailbox every morning, returning phone calls within 24 hours, and using a calendar system to track appointments.
 - Follow school-wide procedures for attire, behavior, and punctuality.
 - Attend and participate in occasional school events outside of regular school hours.
